Seagull Sam

A seagull named Sam made the news all over Scotland for its rather special behaviour. The bird started to regularly go into the newsagents' in Aberdeen. It's well known that seagulls never miss the opportunity to get food. But Sam did even more. He always waited for the moment when the shopkeeper wasn't looking, and then walked into the store. There he took a bag of cheesy crisps and hopped away. Sam always stole crisps of the same flavour, perhaps because of their red-coloured packaging. He carried the bag outside, where he opened it and had a picnic with other seagulls. This was unusual because seagulls never share food and always fight for it. The shopkeeper hated Sam and his seagull friends as he had to pay for the crisps.

The History of Roller Skating

Roller skating has been a popular free time activity for a very long time. In 1863 J. L. Plimpton patented his improved roller skates, forty-four years after M. Petitbled had patented the first roller skates in France. Petitbled's early skates were very similar to the in-line skates we use today, but you could only go in a straight line with them and braking was impossible. Plimpton found them to be dangerous. This is why he used four wheels and a rubber cushion, which allowed control of the skates and braking. They were a huge success. Soon, he opened the first indoor public roller skating rink, which still belongs to his family. Very soon after that he started selling his know-how about building such rinks throughout the US. He also wanted to build a roller skate shop in his family furniture store but his father didn't allow him to do so.

Fifty Bears in One City

When Michael Bond bought a teddy bear as a Christmas present for his wife, the toy inspired him to write. In 10 days he created a book about a bear that got lost at Paddington Station, which was close to where the Bonds lived. Paddington Bear is now popular worldwide because of a film. And what's more, last year, fifty Paddington Bear statues could be found across London close to the places which the bear visited in the book. The statues were auctioned on-line this spring and according to the author's wish all the money went to kids' charities. The statues were created by famous sculptors, so they were a good investment indeed.

Australian artist, Jodi Rose, travels around the world and records vibrations in bridges to create experimental music for her project called Singing Bridges. At first, preservationists¹ were afraid she could damage historical bridges, but when they saw her using only microphones, they stopped worrying. During one of her trips, this time to France, Rose saw a 600-year-old bridge called Pont du Diable. She immediately fell in love with it and wrote about her love on her blog. People thought it was only a strange way to get money for her musical project, but this wasn't the case. Rose took the relationship with the bridge seriously. She even wanted to make it official, so this spring, they had a wedding with wedding rings: a small gold one for the bride and a huge iron one for the bridge. Mrs. Pont du Diable can now continue her project with her 'stone husband'.

Big Surprise

When Ann Johnson opened her birthday present, she wasn't very happy. It was a cat and she was worried about how the cat would get on with her dog Tervel. Her Labrador was blind and partially deaf. He used to lie in his basket most of the time as he couldn't see where he was going. At first the cat didn't like him, but after only a few weeks the cat made Tervel its best friend. However, that was not all. Ann says that the biggest shock came when the cat decided to take on the role of a guide-cat. It waves its tail slightly, making a sort of perfume path. Tervel uses his nose and follows the way. Ann hadn't expected anything like that. It's not surprising that she lets Tervel and the cat enjoy walks in the garden on their own.

- A) When she opened her birthday present.
- B) When the cat started to be the dog's guide.

The Royal Yacht Britannia

Britannia was home to the Royal Family for over 40 years (in service from 1954 to 1997), before it became a museum. Now Britannia is a tourist attraction in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Opening times

Britannia is open every day of the year, except Christmas Day and New Year's Day, from 9.30 a.m. to 4.30 p.m. We suggest you allow up to 2 hours for your Britannia experience. Please note that public tours are not timed, so you can begin your tour at any time within our opening hours. For current ticket prices please see our website.

Tours

- Public tours: The general public can explore the yacht's five decks with our self-led audio tour guide. It will provide you with a rare insight into the life of the British Royal Family. The majority of items on display are the originals, kindly on loan from the Royal Collection. The fascinating audio tour is available in 27 languages and there is a children's version too.
- Special tours: Special tours can be arranged on board Britannia. Both early morning tours and evening tours are available. Instead of an audio guide, a personal guide dressed in a special uniform gives guests a unique insight into the history of the Royal Yacht on these special tours. Special tours must be booked in advance. For more information or prices, contact us on +44 (0) 131 555 8800.

Tour Highlights

- The State Drawing Room: This is where Her Majesty The Queen met her special guests. The room was also used by the Royal Family for relaxing, conversation and games. The atmosphere is truly special; kings and queens, world leaders and celebrities have all dined here.
- The Queen's Bedroom: Everything in this room is as it was in 1954 when Britannia first appeared at sea. It is the only bedroom of a living monarch which is open to the public for viewing.
- The Sun Lounge: The Queen named this as one of her favourite places on board – where she could enjoy her afternoon tea alone. It was her private room where no one else was allowed.
- The Royal Deck Tea Room: On the fifth deck you can find the Royal Deck Tea Room, where the Royal Family enjoyed receptions. You can buy tea, coffee or lunch there. Please note that we are unable to pre-book tables. So at peak times you may wait a while for a free table, but we ensure you will be seated as quickly as possible. The Royal Deck Tea Room opens at 10.00 a.m. and closes at 4.30 p.m.

Accessibility

There is full wheelchair access on board Britannia thanks to a lift alongside Britannia and ramps for easy access to all decks. The only exception is The Royal Deck Tea Room on the fifth deck. This room is accessible only by the original internal lift from the Royal Bedrooms. Unfortunately, this original onboard lift is not big enough for electric wheelchairs.

Annual Pass

After you buy your ticket to visit Britannia, you can apply for a free Annual Pass to come back as many times as you want within the following 12 months. When you visit the ship again with the Annual Pass, you don't have to pay for an entrance ticket and your pass also allows you to get a 15% discount in The Royal Deck Tea Room. Please ask for details about the Annual Pass when you buy your ticket.

The Royal Yacht Britannia Trust

Britannia is now owned by The Royal Yacht Britannia Trust charity organisation that helps to preserve it for future generations. If you want to help, you can fill in a form before you buy your Britannia entrance ticket and hand it in at the ticket office. Only then will the Britannia Trust be able to get £1 from every ticket you buy. It costs you nothing extra, just a few answers and your signature.

The Britannia Gift Shop

Finish your visit with a trip to The Britannia Gift Shop. Back on dry land, after you leave the ship, this award-winning shop in the Ocean Terminal offers exclusive gifts and popular Britannia souvenirs.

Přečtěte si článek o muži jménem Martin Fejk. Na základě informací v textu vyberte k úlohám 40–44 vždy jednu správnou odpověď A–D.

An ordinary man doing something extraordinary

Martin Fejk is a Czech teacher who has run across America and Asia, cycled through Europe, and still wants to do more. Martin has already run in twenty-one marathons, six 50-km races, five 50-mile races and two 100-mile runs. In 2007, he was also a member of the relay¹ team that did a non-stop run around the world, in which Martin ran a distance of three marathons along the East Coast of the United States. This summer, he would like to run solo from Prague to London. He will cover the distance of at least one marathon every day for thirty days. Not many people can run such long distances, but that's what makes Martin so special.

People often compare Martin to the film hero Forrest Gump, who had a great passion for running. He runs every day like Forrest Gump, but unlike the film hero, Martin knows exactly why he runs. Surprisingly, Martin says that he doesn't run because he wants other people to run with him, running is something he could easily live without. Martin runs for Green Planet, which is a charity organisation working to bring drinking water to poor people around the world. And this is the motive for Martin: he wants to raise more money for this organisation as he knows that water is necessary for everyday life. Running from Prague to London, he will stop at many places to talk to the public and explain why he is running and how they can help. They don't have to join him in his run, they can help those in need by supporting Green Planet financially.

With about two months left to prepare, Martin runs 4–8 miles on weekday trainings and has long runs at the weekend, running 12–20 miles on both Saturday and Sunday. When asked how difficult it is to train for such a long run, he answers, "Teaching kids can be exhausting, but is running complicated? It's just running, nothing hard. One foot in front of the other." It may sound boring to some people, but it's absolutely normal for someone who has run 100 miles in less than 24 hours. Martin says, "Just keep it easy. Why make simple things complicated?"

Martin is physically ready for his run, but there are still problems to solve. Currently, he is concentrating on details of the 1266km route. There are still a few things to do, even though the route itself has already been carefully planned and all financial sponsors have been found. Martin has to discuss co-operation with his main sponsor, the International Sport School; find kind people along the route who will let him stay overnight and book the ferry to cross the Channel from Calais. He doesn't worry about anything. "From Prague, just go West," he says with a smile.

Martin is clearly in very good shape. He is super-slim and pretty leggy as most long-distance runners are, but he doesn't have the conduct of a typical athlete who is ambitious and goal-oriented. On the contrary, he is relaxed, calm and doesn't show his qualities. He is simply an ordinary man doing something extraordinary.
